Wise Words: Do not look forward in fear to the changes in life; rather, look to them with full hope that as they arise, God, whose very own you are, will lead you safely through all things; & when you cannot stand it, God will carry you in his arms. - St Francis de Sales

To Human Experience

12th Sunday in Ordinary Time

We human beings prefer to have sufficient proof that something will work before we venture forth into an unknown. For example, after the Discovery shuttle disaster, NASA spent years amassing proof that shuttle travel would be safe. Nevertheless, it took great trust for the next team of astronauts to venture forth into space. Proof is easier than trust.

Parents understand well the responsibility and privilege of calling their children beyond where they are at any stage in their lives. For example, encouraging a toddler to walk, a youngster to ride a bike, a teenager to make right decisions, etc. Basic to this process is parents teaching their children to trust their own innate abilities and grow into capable and independent adults. Our faith journey is a similar process. Even though the disciples had already experienced some of Jesus' miracles, this new situation at sea was different: the violence of the storm threatened their lives and was beyond their power to control. Jesus' care for them and his power over creation led them to greater faith and trust. Jesus is the "parent" who calls us, his disciples today, to go beyond our own previous experiences and our limited understanding of his presence in our lives. In the "storms" of our own lives, Jesus is always present—through other people, within ourselves, in the very challenge of the situation. Each challenge in life offers us more and more reasons to trust in Jesus—concrete evidence of our continual growth in faith.
